Reading Braille

Some people cannot see as well as others. Some cannot see at all - they've lost their sense of sight, or were born without it. These people are blind. Some blind people learn how to read braille with the tips of their fingers, using their sense of touch. Braille is a 3D code made up of combinations of dots. Write your name in braille below.

Sign Language

Some people cannot hear as well as others. Some cannot hear at all – they've lost their sense of hearing, or were born without it. These people are deaf. Deaf people use their hands to talk to others. This is called sign language. Just like spoken words, signs can be different depending on where you live. North Americans use American Sign Language (ASL). Cut and paste letters from the ASL alphabet to spell your name below.

SENSORY AIDS

Many people wear glasses if they cannot see objects that are close to them (farsighted) or far away from them (nearsighted). Reading without glasses can be difficult for farsighted people.

Many people who are hard of hearing wear hearing aids. Hearing aids amplify sounds, making them louder and easier to hear.

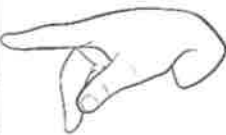

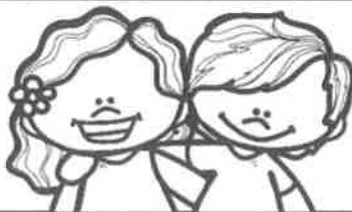

Blind people use canes and highly trained guide dogs to help them navigate busy, unfamiliar places. You should never pet a guide dog. They are working hard to keep their owners safe.

My ears clean themselves. Earwax inside my ears collects dirt and bacteria. Earwax works its way out of my body through jaw movements. I don't need to put anything in my ears.
